If, however, they refuse to drink the permanganated water must be put down the throat in teaspoonfuls. Any one reading the treatment will see that there is much truth in the old saying, "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure."

Perhaps it is well to again point out the necessity for cleanliness. Cleanliness is a topic much harped on in this colmore value for convincing Englishmen umn, because the want of it causes much trouble in the management of chickens. To the lack of it are due many failures. Of course, a man who is not clean in his chicken business should not be in the business. He would fail in any business. In roup the discharge from the head becomes very thick, and sometimes obstructs the nostrils, so that the fowl has to breathe through the mouth. The tongue and the mouth become dry, and a scale forms on the tip of the tongue. The discharge sometimes collects in the passages of the hard, and finds its way into the sockets of the eyes. In some instances the eye is forced out of the
